We were excited to welcome students to our Jerome Grand community in Dublin, Ohio, where they learned firsthand how we build, lease, and maintain our properties. Together, we explored not only rental rates and resident needs, but also the broader financial realities of housing affordability and other monthly bill-paying considerations. The students were incredibly engaged, asking thoughtful questions and recognizing that housing will likely be their largest expense as adults. It was a meaningful conversation, and we were honored to give them a glimpse into what their future may hold.

For companies across Central Ohio and beyond, opportunities like this are invaluable. Allowing at-risk youth to step inside your workplace can help bridge the opportunity divide by exposing them to industries, careers, and financial realities they may not otherwise encounter. These moments can spark curiosity, build confidence, and open doors to possibilities that change the way they see their future because sometimes, a single conversation or new experience can inspire a young person to pursue a path they never imagined. That's the true impact—planting seeds of knowledge and opportunity that may grow into life-changing decisions later on. The key is to share openly, teach them something new, and make the learning process both fun and inspiring!

Sincerely,
